School board

Three candidates for two spots

By Donna Vallieres
Herald Staff Writer

Two school board seats are up for grabs in the Terrace district and three contenders are vying for the positions. Two are incumbent trustees, Jack Cook and Elaine Johnson, and the third is Lorna Romilly, a newcomer to Terrace politics.

We unfortunately were unable to speak with Jack Cook, a store manager, because a convenient time for an interview could not be arranged, but we did speak with Johnson, a homemaker, and Romilly, a director at Osbourne Guest Home.

Topics which cropped up in both discussions were the quality of education in the district and what taxpayers could expect in terms of increases.

Romilly

Lorna Romilly believes that parents and teachers should get together more often to work co-operatively rather than treating each other as adversaries.

"Parents don't usually get involved (in schools) until their kid's in trouble," she said, "and that's too late."

Romilly thinks the school board should set up a parents' advisory committee to give parents an avenue through which they can participate in their children's education and make recommendations for their schools.

There should also be more communication from the board to the public, Romilly said, as well as better communication between board members as far as committee minutes go.

Students come first in Romilly's opinion.

She's after quality education and accepts the concept of core curriculum, but not at the expense of enrichment programs such as extra-physical education, French, drama and music.

"There's not much you can do about it now," she said of the core curriculum requirements set down by the Department of Education. "But just because it's there we shouldn't do away with other things."

French especially is an important subject for children to learn at an early age, Romilly said, when youngsters find it more enjoyable and it's easier to learn.

"You throw French at kids in junior high and they hate it," she said.

Children with learning disabilities are another of Romilly's concerns, believing that children should have equal learning opportunities.

Often learning disabilities are not recognized in young children and even when they are there isn't always room in existing programs to deal with the child's special

Director of the Osbourne Guest Home, Lorna Romilly says the school board should set up an advisory committee of parents so they can participate in their children's education and co-operate rather than fight the schoolboard.

problem. Romilly, director of Osbourne guest home, said there should be school psychologists and special courses for teachers so the schools can effectively deal with learning problems.

Alternate schools are another way to offer equal education to all students, Romilly said.

"I think it's important to offer an alternative not only if (the students) are disruptive, but if they have learning problems," she said.

All of this does not mean there has to be more money raised through school taxes, Romilly stressed.

"There could be more control of where the money is spent," she said, adding that students should get "the best education possible with the money available."

However, Romilly said taxpayers may have to face continuing high education costs to maintain the quality of education.

"If you want good education you may have to pay for it," she said.

control of education on the local level."

Johnson does disagree with the contention that school boards have much power over the school system. Although there is an $11 million budget, 80 per cent of this goes to salaries.

But, she admitted, school boards do have control over the district curriculum.

"That's where the power and importance lies," Johnson said.

Concerning core curriculum, Johnson stated she felt the "exercise was very valuable" because it involved parents in discussions about what their children were learning in school.

She agrees with the concept of core curriculum, Johnson said, "but I don't like the term back to basics. I don't know what the basics are."

Instead the curriculum should meet the needs of the students.

"I think the taxpayer is burdened already," Johnson said while speaking of the cost of education. "The board has got to spend as effectively as possible."

"Education has become very expensive," she said, and the burden rests on the taxpayer. "But we're working with our most important resource in the country.

"It's going to cost us money, but we're trying to be effective in spending."

Johnson spoke highly of school district 88, stating that the schools, teaching staff and administration are all doing the job.

When asked about the alternate education system, Johnson explained that the system in Terrace has been re-evaluated a number of times and has undergone several changes.

"Some people are very upset" because it has changed from a separate facility, Johnson explained, but stated that the board is now trying to integrate the students into the classrooms with the help to support staff.

Johnson is also concerned with French programs which are now in existence at elementary schools in Thornhill and Clarence Michael. A committee has been set up to look at the programs within the district.

Johnson said she is pleased that the board is finally setting up objectives and goals for the future.

She promised to "try and work hard as a trustee...and give as much as possible."

Veteran trustee Elaine Johnston says schoolboards must spend their funds as effectively as possible. The cost of education may be high, she said, but children are our most important resource.

Johnson

After two terms on the school board Elaine Johnson can look back over the changes in local education.

During the four years she has served as a trustee, Johnson has seen the establishment and expansion of career-oriented programs, alternate education, French courses and a drop in the pupil-teacher ratio.

"School boards are very important," she said. "It's important to have some

RCMP in the habit of opening private mail

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster General Jean-Jacques Blais Wednesday ordered an investigation into a CBC television report that the RCMP has been opening first class mail for 10 years.

The CBC report says the opening of domestic and foreign mail began in the 1960s and continued in 1976 under an operation code-named Cathedral.

The report says the operation was ordered by divisional heads within the RCMP security service and engineered by the sources section of the federal force, which maintains agents and informants in government departments including the post office.

Maureen Boyd, press secretary to Blais, said in an interview that no one can legally intercept and open first-class mail in Canada.

"The post office is not in complicity with the RCMP for opening mail," Boyd said. "We're saying we have no knowledge of that."

Anyone caught opening mail, or handing it to the RCMP to be opened, is liable under Section 43 of the Post Office Act to penalties of up to three years in prison, a $3,000 fine, or both.

It would be "clearly illegal" under Section 43 for a postal employee or anyone else to even delay a first-class letter, she said.

SAID HAS PROOF

Lloyd Crouse (PC—South Shore) told reporters Wednesday he has proof the RCMP had opened a letter sent him last August from St. Thomas, Ont. The letter had been opened when Crouse received it and bore the stamp of the RCMP technical unit.

Mr. Justice David C. McDonald, chairman of a royal commission set up in July to look into the extent of illegal RCMP activity, said in an interview he has asked the commission counsel to "launch inquiries" about the CBC report.

Blais said it appeared a letter addressed to Crouse as a member of Parliament had been misdirected to Government House, where suspicious RCMP had it run through a fluoroscope to ensure it was not dangerous.

Conservative MP Steve Paproski (Edmonton Centre) also complained in the Commons Wednesday that he had received a letter last August stamped "Inspected by RCMP technical unit. Safe to handle."

Paproski said he found the RCMP "safe to handle" stamp on a letter he received Aug. 18. It was a bill to his executive assistant for flowers sent to the wife of Gerald Baldwin (PC—Peace River).

Paproski said he did not raise the matter earlier because he wanted to see whether other MPs had had the same experience.

Fed. grant was in jeopardy

VANCOUVER (CP) — The former New Democratic Party government proceeded with the financially disastrous Dease Lake extension of the British Columbia Railway in the belief that it would lose a $117 million federal government grant if it did not, the royal commission inquiry into the railway was told Tuesday.

The railway felt that it was locked into an agreement with Ottawa which would provide funding for the extension, said Mac Norris railway vice-president.

The evidence was given as the commission continued its probe of the politically motivated decisions which caused a series of government payments to pour money into the extension despite overruns of more than 300 per cent.

Norris told the commission Friday that the government of former premier Dave Barrett was warned at least twice during 1975 that the extension was running far over budget, but pressed on with the extension, as did the current Social Credit government of Bill Bennett.

The extension was not halted until April of this year, when the federal government promised $81 million—on the condition that the work stop.

Yukon Indians ask for money

WHITEHORSE, Yukon (CP) — The Council for Yukon Indians said Wednesday it has proposed that the federal government give Yukon Indians a grant to mitigate the effects of the Alaska Highway pipeline.

The council said in a news release that land claims negotiations and the pipeline were discussed at a meeting Tuesday with Hugh Faulkner, minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

The council said that while it was agreed it would be unrealistic to place a time limit on settlement, CYI chairman Daniel Johnson said the council would like to see the claims settled before the pipeline is built.

CYI said Faulkner reacted favorably to its suggestion Yukon Indians receive a $50 million pipeline impact grant.

Faulkner said he supported the idea of Yukon Indian representation on a pipeline regulatory agency but added that no guarantees could be made as the decision does not rest with his department, the council said.

man who died as a result of burns suffered in a bulk oil plant fire Sept. 7, a coroner's inquest was told Wednesday.

Coroner Dr. Michael Smart was told the broken padlock was found in the pocket of Ian Michael Tychonick, 28, after he was taken to Vancouver General Hospital with severe burns.

Volunteer fireman Barney Moriez, 60, died in the multi-million dollar early-morning blaze at bulk plants owned by Shell Canada Ltd. and Chevron Chemical (Canada) Ltd., in an oil-tank farm on the Nanaimo waterfront.

Tychonick died Oct. 20 in Vancouver from blood infection and pneumonia, complications which resulted from the burns he suffered to 70 per cent of his body. He had been charged with arson and manslaughter.

The padlock, which was identified by its serial number, was found by Anne Staley, head nurse at the hospital's burn unit, as she checked Tychnick's belongings on admission to hospital.

Earlier, Nanaimo RCMP Constable Bob Mollet and civilian Steve Wilson testified they pulled Tychnick from the compound shortly after the fire started.

Mollet told the five-man jury he was driving past the plant at about 4:20 a.m. when he saw flames. He said he parked his cruiser and approached ferry worker Wilson, who was watching the fire, when a man with his clothes smoldering ran from the direction of the flames to the wire fence surrounding the compound.

He and Wilson jumped the fence and dragged the man, later identified as Tychnick, out through a hole they kicked in a wooden part of the fence.

"I asked him what he was doing in there and he said he had seen flames and gone in," said Mollet.

Tychonick was taken to Nanaimo Regional Hospital and later transferred to Vancouver.

Vancouver police Constable Stuart Wolfenden told the jury he interviewed Tychnick in Vancouver Sept. 17.

FEELING ANGRY Tychnick told him he was feeling angry that night and had gone for a walk past the compound.

Wolfenden testified that Tychnick said the compound wasn't burning when he entered, and he had been attracted by the sound of rushing water.

"It wasn't burning when I went in," Tychnick told Wolfenden. "I could hear it. Like rushing water. That's what I wanted to look at."

Tychonick told him he noticed all the valves on the tanks were open and he thought children had been in there.

Wolfenden said when he asked about the padlock, Tychnick said he didn't know how it came to be in his pocket.

Moriez, a volunteer fireman with the Nanaimo brigade, died when a storage tank erupted as he was attempting to remove a loaded gasoline truck from the compound.

The inquest continues.

Oil port inquiry to have recess

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Andrew Thompson, inquiry commissioner of the West Coast oil ports inquiry, said Wednesday the inquiry will be recessed.

Thompson said the inquiry would be reactivated as required at some later date or on the orders of the federal government.

The inquiry commissioner returned here from Ottawa, where he held talks with federal cabinet ministers on extending the length of the inquiry and giving it more money.

Various intervenors in the inquiry into the impact of establishing an oil port on the British Columbia coast have demanded additional money.

Funding of $380,000 was made available to various special interest groups when the inquiry began last spring, but spokesmen for such groups as the Klitmat Oil Coalition demanded more money to research the hazards involved with transshipment of Alaskan crude oil.

Meanwhile, Environment Canada said Dr. Thompson would review the evidence before him and hear from inquiry participants until the end of the year. It said he will submit a statement of proceedings to Fisheries and Environment Minister Otto Lang and Transport Minister Otto Lang in the spring.

Environment Canada said there are no active applications before the federal government for construction of an oil port on the B.C. coast, but that Dr. Thompson's report would provide assistance on how to deal with any forthcoming applications.

Captains of russian trawlers found not guilty

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial court Judge Jack McGivern said Wednesday he found the captains of two Russian trawlers not guilty of unlawfully fishing within Canadian waters because there was reasonable doubt the ships were within the restricted zone.

"I am satisfied the evidence does not establish the guilt of the accused," Judge McGivern said in giving the reasons for his not guilty decision Friday. Yakov Karpitsky, captain of the Russian trawler Druzhba, and Yarsola Nedelsky, captain of the trawler Ugolny, were charged Sept. 20 with fishing for hake in the restricted zone 5-1 after their vessels were boarded by fisheries officers off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

It was the first time charges under the Coastal Fisheries Protection Act were laid against a foreign fleet on the West Coast since Canada extended its fishing zone to 200 miles from 12 miles on Jan. 1.

Positions taken by radar on the trawlers before they were boarded show they were more than two miles outside the restricted zone. Readings taken by the Canadians with a new electronic device known as Loran C showed the trawlers were 4.4 miles inside the international boundary. Judge McGivern said that because of testimony given by defence witnesses that radar is better suited than Loran C for use in the area in question, he was forced to conclude that a reasonable doubt existed as to the location of the vessels.

Ferry runs aground

VANCOUVER (CP) — A CP Rail ferry freighter, which ran aground in Active Pass early Wednesday was pulled free by two tugs and refloated Wednesday afternoon.

A search and rescue spokesman said the 380-foot Carrier Princess would be taken to Swartz Bay, north of Victoria, for examination by divers.

The $5.25 million ferry went aground while travelling through fog and rain from here to Swartz Bay.

Earlier, a CP Rail spokesman said that first surveys showed no serious damage and no oil leakage from the vessel's hull.

The ferry, with a crew of 14, carried 16 highway transport trailers as cargo.

The spokesman said if the ferry had been more heavily loaded, the damage likely would have been much greater.

$2.5 million in stolen stones Vancouver vault robbers get sentenced VANCOUVER (CP) — Sentences ranging from five to eight years were handed out Wednesday to four Montreal men for last January's robbery of the Vancouver Safety Deposit Vaults.

The four men had pleaded guilty to two counts of possession of stolen property in the $2.5 million robbery.

Judge Kerry Smith sentenced Ronald McCann, 46, to two eight-year terms, and Kenneth Fisher, 30, to two six-year terms. He gave Paul Brentwick, 26, and Robert Johnstone, 37, five years each on the two counts. All sentences will be served concurrently.

A fifth man, Talbot Murphy, 49, of Surrey, B.C., has jumped $50,000 bail and a warrant is out for his arrest.

In sentencing, Judge Smith noted that Brentwick had no previous record, Johnstone had a minor record, Fisher a previous conviction for possession of stolen property, and McCann had an extensive criminal record.

The judge said he would have handed out longer terms if he had been sentencing on the January break-in itself.

Judge Smith said that in order to determine proper sentences for an offence, a judge should be made aware of all circumstances of the offence but, the defence's submission in the case "casts little light on the circumstances."

The judge had said earlier that the guilty pleas left him in the dark.

He revealed evidence indicating that the break-in on the weekend of Jan. 7-10 1977 was the result of eight to 12 hours of work by skilled operators.

About 1,200 of the 2,000 safety deposit boxes were rifled, and the value of the property taken ranged from $2 million to $2.5 million.

Special prosecutor John Hall had told the court that only because of a CP Air baggage handler's inability to lift a suitcase destined for Montreal did what would have been one of Vancouver's biggest robberies begin to unfold.

Hall said CPA officials became suspicious of nine pieces of heavy baggage and quickly called RCMP, who searched and found large amounts of money, gold bars and coins, diamonds and other precious gems, as well as mounted jewelry.

Fisher, Johnstone, and McCann were arrested at Vancouver International Airport prior to take-off after being identified by airport staff as having checked the baggage.

Brentwick was arrested in flight he took to Montreal Winnipeg because an earlier was diverted.

Carter-Congress tensions relieved

WASHINGTON (CP) — Future generations will probably take little note of the fact that on Saturday, Nov. 5, 1977, Jimmy Carter performed the 2,359th presidential veto in U.S. history.

The act, however, was another symbolic landmark in the Carter presidency and confirms a return to normal political tension between Congress and the White House.

The occasion for the Nov. 5 veto—Carter's first since taking office last January—was a bill directing that work proceed on the controversial Clinch River nuclear breeder reactor, a demonstration plant using nuclear technology that Carter wants other countries to refrain from developing.

White House officials said that Carter hoped to get through 1977 without casting any veto, both to maintain good relations with Congress and to create a contrast with the vetoprene presidency of Gerald Ford.

Ford was heavily criticized in last year's presidential election campaign for performing 66 vetoes in his two-year term. While unusually high in relation to such a short term, Ford's veto total is still far from the record 635 of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

CHOOSING WELL

Though still running the risk that his prestige may suffer if Congress over-rides his veto, Carter seems to have chosen his first subject well.

By trying to kill the controversial reactor project, he automatically gains support from those concerned over nuclear proliferation and those who object to the reactor's $2.2 billion cost. The White House contends that in addition to the problems the project would create in non-proliferation efforts, it is unnecessarily expensive and would be technologically obsolete when complete.

But there is still strong support in Congress for the project and the Washington Post editorialized: "Because being over-riden or otherwise stared down on a first veto has ripple effects of damage to a president that go beyond the subject at hand, Mr. Carter was taking a pretty hefty risk in deciding to cast his first veto on this bill."

The Post, however, applauded Carter's decision, saying the political risk is justified and Carter's position demonstrates both sound values and political courage.

Now that Carter has broken the ice with his first veto, the president may well have less hesitation in subsequent veto decisions.

In his nationally-televised speech on the energy crisis, Carter warned that he might turn down Congress's much-altered version of his energy program.

And press secretary Jody Powell recently retracted a White House pledge that there would be no veto on a proposed bill to allow everyone full social security benefits regardless of outside income. White House officials say removing the ceiling on outside income—now $3,000 for persons 65 to 71—could cost $3.5 billion a year.

The danger for Carter may lie not so much in the vetoes as in the way he presents them.

An overbearing assertion of an exclusive claim to morality could greatly damage his already-strained relations with Congress.

Yet in his televised energy speech, he referred to the possibility of vetoing congressional energy bills and then depicted the coming clash of principles in uncompromising terms:

"This is not a contest of strength between the president and the Congress, nor between the House and the Senate. What is being measured is the strength and will of our nation."

Picturing White House-Congress disputes in such apocalyptic rhetoric may make good television, but does little for the president's day-to-day relationship with Congress.

Cotton instead of wood pulp?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The director of the American Newspaper Publishers Association research institute says the United States agricultural department is experimenting with kenaf, a fibre plant related to cotton, for use in newsprint.

Irwin Jaffe said in a recent interview from Easton, Pa., that a newsprint shortage caused by striking pulp workers in British Columbia and Canadian railway workers in 1975 spurred the U.S. government to look for alternatives to wood pulp for newsprint production.

The Peoria Journal Star in Peoria, Ill., already has completed a press run using experimental, kenaf-based newsprint.

The new type of newsprint, however, is not seen as a major threat to Canadian wood-based newsprint.

Dave Fricker, senior vice-president for law and corporate affairs at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., said kenaf-based newsprint does not compare in quality with traditional newsprint.

Jaffe said indications so far are that kenaf newsprint could be produced at a cost competitive with conventional newsprint, but it probably would take two years of study before the full economic and quality implications were known.

He said it was impossible to be sure that production costs would continue to be competitive on a commercial basis and there was no guarantee that kenaf would be used.

Jaffe said government testing should not be considered a scare situation for Canadian newsprint producers and the motive is to provide an alternate source to alleviate expected shortages due to greater demand on wood pulp for purposes other than newsprint.

He said U.S. publishers have not been happy about the sharp increases in newsprint prices "from $140 a ton to more than $300 in just a few years," combined with a drop in quality.

Jaffe said that during the Canadian strikes in 1975 some U.S. publishers exhausted all their inventories and were forced to scour the black market for individual supplies.

Canada sells about $1.9 billion of newsprint to the U.S. annually and B.C. newsprint accounts for about $274 million of those sales.

About 65 per cent of current U.S. consumption is from Canadian sources.

The kenaf-based newsprint used in the Peoria Journal Star experiment was made last summer at the U.S. department of agriculture's northern regional research centre in Peoria.

Research findings show that kenaf newsprint has nearly the same bursting pressure as commercial newsprint, with only five per cent less strength, and is similar in brightness and opacity.

Kenaf, which originated in the Far East, can be grown in Minnesota and other northern states, but is best suited to the soil and growing season of the southeastern U.S.

Jaffe said the fibre could be grown as far north as Canada, as long as there were 120 frost-free days.

He said a particular advantage of kenaf is that it is an annual crop and production could be increased or decreased from year to year as consumption demands.

Investment statistics show Quebec able to stand alone

QUEBEC (CP) — A government publication, citing numerous projects and investments in Quebec, says the pro-separatist policies of the Parti Quebecois government are not causing as much uncertainty as some federalists claim.

In fact, investment plans in 1977 show "clear progress" compared with 1976, says an article in the current edition of the intergovernmental affairs department magazine, Quebec en Bref (Quebec in brief).

"Although weak sectors of the economy are threatened or have suffered the loss of at least 5,000 jobs since the beginning of the year, other more vigorous sectors have announced in the same period investments of more than $875 million," the article said.

It gives a list of investments, all previously announced, which includes $380 million in a pulp and kraft-paper project by Donohue-St. Felicien Inc. and the Quebec government, at St. Felicien, 240 kilometres north of Quebec City.

Other investments cited as evidence of a healthy economy include $200 million by Alcan Aluminium Ltd. for a new smelter at La Baie, 200 kilometres north of Quebec City, and a $100-million investment by Canadian Industries Ltd. for expansion of a plant at Beancour, 130 kilometres northeast of Montreal.

GM INVESTS

The article also mentioned a $36-million investment by General Motors for expansion of its plant at Ste. Therese, 20 kilometres north of Montreal; a $23-million investment by Bendix Corp. and Healy Industries for a foundry at Farnham, 55 kilometres east of Montreal; and a $22.5-million expansion by O'Keefe Brewing Co. Ltd. of its Montreal plant.

Other examples included an investment by La Prudential group in the construction of a $40-million commercial centre at St. Bruno near Montreal and a $9-million investment by the same group in the Westmount 1 building being built by Premiere Quebec Corp. Quebec en Bref noted that Hyatt International Corp. has opened an 800-room hotel in Montreal at a cost of $40 million, "despite the difficulties of the tourist industry."

The article also mentioned Hydro-Quebec investments of $2.17 billion in 1977, an increase of 70 per cent compared with 1976, and an investment of $5 million by General Electric of Canada in the Quebec City region.

The federal government and its agencies are participating as well in the increase in investment in Quebec, the article said, including a $3-to-$4 million investment by Canadian National Railways.

More classes than teachers

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — There is a shortage of French teachers in British Columbia and, because French programs are expanding, the situation will get worse unless something is done, Floyd Celli, elementary school French co-ordinator for School District 24, said Monday.

Celli, of the Kamloops area, told a public hearing on teacher training that more elementary teachers should receive French training.

Fifty-nine of the province's 72 school districts now teach French, Celli said, which is a tremendous increase over the last 10 years.

Jim Carter, a member of the six-man public hearing panel, said it would be better to have specialists trained in French rather than teach the language to a large number of teachers. Celli said elementary school teachers are not encouraged to specialize and that all-round educators have a better rapport with their students.

Some elementary school teachers have not had French training since Grade 9, he said.

IMPROVEMENT NEEDED

Celli said teachers could improve their ability to teach French through informal minicourses or monthly meetings. Teachers should be given incentives to take summer programs in French, he said, adding that since universities are the major source for recruiting new teachers, the number of French programs in those institutions should be increased.

The panel was also told that there are a number of gaps in the teacher training program.

One speaker said the three major training centres for teachers in B.C.—the University of B.C., University of Victoria and Simon Fraser University—lack information on early childhood education, how to fill out a report card and how to deal effectively with colleagues and students' parents.

Cecil Ash, of the Kamloops District Teachers Association, said learning disabilities are not covered in the teaching programs, so teachers can not recognize or treat them.

The hearing also was told that teachers should complete a year of intern training before receiving their teaching certificates.

Speakers said a teacher should not be given full responsibility for a class in his first year of teaching and therefore should not receive a full salary.

Robert Taylor, superintendent of School District 29, said the first year of teaching should be looked at as a teacher's last year of training.

CONCEPT ENDORSED
Ash said the apprenticeship concept was endorsed by the teachers' association.

Cam Murray, a Kamloops teacher, said teachers stumble through their first year on the job and, although they are keen and imaginative, they are really not effective teachers.

A teaching student said she liked the idea of apprenticing for a year, even though it would mean lower pay.

Margaret Brown, a Kamloops teacher, said practice teaching should come early in the training program to give students a chance to find out if they have the proper skills to become a teacher.

Several speakers said applicants to the teaching program are being accepted largely on their academic records and this is not enough to judge a potentially good teacher.

"Only those who can effectively deal with children should be allowed to complete the course," Taylor said.

MORE SCREENING NEEDED

Hearing chairman Malcolm McGregor said there is not enough screening done of teaching students and that it is not enough just to look over their records.

The hearing was told teachers still have to be models for the community in their personal behavior when they work in small towns and rural areas.

"You're really a fish in a goldfish bowl," Taylor said. "If you want to kick up your heels for a weekend you should go to Vancouver."

Taylor said no hiring is done in his district until the prospective teacher has visited the community he is to work in, to see if he would fit in a rural setting.

Labour supports instructors stand

The Delegates to the Kitimat-Terrace Labour Council, at their recent regular meeting, unanimously supported the industrial first aid instructors and their courses provided through the Northwest Community College. In the experience of the membership, these College-based courses provided Industrial first aid training meeting Workers' Compensation Board standards, giving the workers first class equipment and training as compared to the previous haphazard and unsatisfactory system.

To us, the record shows that St. John's performance in Industrial First Aid is inadequate, offering sub-standard instruction and equipment. To them the cost factor appears to be of more concern than the quality of instruction.

When industrial first aid was offered under the College's auspices, any surplus revenues from the programme was ploughed back into the expansion and upgrading of the programme. If it is offered under St. John's, any surplus monies will be used for non-related purposes — and this is unacceptable to our affiliated unions, who, in many cases, pay the tuition fees.

While we appreciate St. John's efforts in fields outside of Industrial First Aid, nevertheless because our members' lives and welfare depend upon having high quality trained first aid attendants, we strongly object to the retrograde step as proposed by your Ministry.

Yours truly,
N. Smith,
Secretary,
Kitimat-Terrace
Labour Council

Hymn - "Abide With Me"

Abide with me; fast falls the eventide;
The darkness deepens; Lord, with me abide;
When other helpers fail, and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless, O abide with me.

Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day;
Earth's joys grown dim; its glories pass away;
Change and decay in all around I see;
O thou, who changest not, abide with me.

Hold thou thy cross before my closing eyes;
Shine through the gloom, and point me to the skies;
Heaven's morning breaks, and earth's vain shadows flee;
In life, in death, O LORD, abide with me.

Dies at the opening day.

O GOD, our help in ages past,

Our hope for years to come;

Be thou our guard while troubles last,

And our eternal home!

He powers that be may change the date of Remembrance Day, but they cannot change the meaning and purpose of it: to honor our veterans of many wars fought in many places for reasons, but the underlying one is always directly or indirectly the preservation of your freedoms. It cost them years out of their lives, with many resulting personal losses and hardships and, in some cases, permanent injury. It cost others life itself. To honor them by availing yourself of this freedom will cost you only but one moment of silence.

ALL COPIES SOLD TORONTO (CP) - A Canadian publishing company has announced that all 135 copies of the first $1,000 book ever produced by the company have been sold to Canadian book-sellers. The book, a limited edition of Tom Thomson: The Silence and the Storm, has a numbered, signed lithograph portrait of Tom Thomson by Harold Town, a co-author.

WORKS EXHIBITED TORONTO (CP) - Almost 10 years' work of Halifax artist Gerald Ferguson is being exhibited at the Art Gallery of Ontario. The show, which consists of 23 paintings from 1968 to the present, was organized by the Dalhousie Art Gallery in Nova Scotia and will last through December 31.

VANCOUVER (CP) - British Columbia Railway is starting at the prospect of a phenomenal $700 million debt by the end of the century if its Fort Nelson line is kept operational and the Crown railway proceeds with a costly link to northeast coal deposits, the inquiry into railway affairs was told Wednesday.

Dr. Karl Ruppenthal, director of the Centre for Transportation Studies at the University of B.C., said it was probably the most melancholy report he has made in his career, but "it's well for the people to know what the realities are—these enormous numbers."

The forecast means 20 per cent of the provincial budget will be needed to prop up BCR by the end of the century, provided B.C.'s economic condition and tax rate remain constant.

The royal commission was told how the $700 million figure almost equals current provincial revenue from personal income tax, and is $300 million more than the total revenue the government now receives in taxes from mining, forestry, corporate income and corporate capital taxes.

Even if BCR took the alternative of axing the losing Fort Nelson extension and scrapping costly plans for a new line to the northeast, Ruppenthal said BCR would still lose $550 million by the year 2000.

$700 million debt in store for BCR

Ruppenthal's outlook, presented on behalf of the railway, was the bleakest since the commission began its inquiry in March this year.

BCR BANKRUPT "If BCR was a private company, instead of a royal commission hearing we would presently be in a bankruptcy court—and the discussion might take the direction that losses should be wiped-out and BCR should begin a new," Ruppenthal said.

He agreed with commission counsel Martin Taylor, however, that BCR debts can't be wiped out. They can be taken from BCR books, but they inevitably would show up on some other provincial government balance sheet.

Taylor asked whether it is a valid hope for B.C. that the United States government might bail-out BCR by sinking capital into a rail link to Alaska. But Ruppenthal said the idea was a "dream, not a hope."

He also said while mineral finds are possible, unless there is a faster method developed for growing trees, "out of rock say", then extra forestry traffic is improbable.

Ruppenthal produced data showing needed additional funds climbing to $720 million by 2000 with a link from Anzac to coal fields, compared to $630 million without the link.

INCREASE NEEDS

While BCR's operating profit would grow as high as $9 million with the link, the railway's rolling stock needs would increase to $38 million.

Ruppenthal agreed northeast coal development is not an attractive proposition for the railway. And Taylor said the figures leave one wondering why coal development plans are proceeding.

BCR counsel George Cumming accused Taylor of "rolling up leggings and swabbing the desks with melancholy."

Cumming questioned Taylor's comparison of projected losses with present-day budget provisions, but Ruppenthal said later that the two can be compared provided conditions remain constant. He agreed the forecast means 20 per cent of the provincial budget will be needed for BCR by 2000, as long as tax and economic figures remain in the same realm.

Ruppenthal, assisted in the presentation by Professor W. G. Waters and centre student Thomas Keast, said finances were not BCR's sole problem. Being almost totally dependent on the forestry industry and other railroads, Ruppenthal said he knows of no other railway as much constrained as BCR is.

The inquiry continues.

Zoo to join aquarium

VANCOUVER (CP) - A 15-year plan to unite Vancouver Public Aquarium and the Stanley Park Zoo into one big aquatic garden with a new whale pool was unveiled Wednesday by the Vancouver Public Aquarium Association.

Association president Larry Dampier told a press conference at the aquarium that the plan represents a "new spirit of cooperation" between the aquarium and the parks board which is responsible for the zoo.

Aquarium director Dr. Murray Newman said the aquarium's share of the plan would probably cost about $4 million, but no definite cost estimates have yet been made.

The integration of the aquarium and the zoo would be completed within the boundaries of the present facilities with the addition of one strip of parkland measuring 200 by 200 feet.

Although much of the existing zoo blacktop will be replaced by duck ponds, the zoo exhibits such as the polar bears, penguins, and others will remain. The new whale pool, three times the size of the present one will be on the north side of the area, overlooking Vancouver harbor.

The pool will be fronted by a rock escarpment so that people in the park will see the whales' fins above the natural rock. The beluga whales will be moved to the existing killer whale pool and dolphins will move into the pool now used by the belugas.

Newman said that there is a real possibility that the killer whales will produce offspring and therefore a much larger pool is needed.

The aquarium association is self-supporting and Dampier said that he hopes the association will be able to raise the new capital funds required, but there is also the possibility of capital grants from government departments such as federal fisheries.

Instrument pipefitter Len Homenchuk, an expert snooker player, takes a shot after an exhibition series of games he played at Terrace Recreation Centre Tuesday night while local player Dan Rosengren looks on. Homenchuk of Vancouver, who made the Canadian national snooker team which toured the United Kingdom recently, was doing repair work at Mills Memorial Hospital here and stopped by the billiard hall to show his form. He lost games to Rosengren and Ken Dean, but beat local players Rob Kornblum and George Kirby. Those wishing to start a snooker league are asked to leave their names at the Recreation Centre.

New line-up Lions raring to go

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wide receiver John Sciarra, who hasn't played since July 12, will be in the British Columbia starting lineup Saturday when the Lions host Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Western Football Conference semi-final play-off game.

Sciarra caught five passes in the regular-season opener against Calgary Stampeders, but suffered a pulled hamstring muscle and was put on the injured reserve list. His replacement, Leon Bright, played so well that Sciarra didn't make it back to the active roster in the next 15 games.

Bright, the western finalist in the rookie-of-the-year race in the Canadian Football League, will be moved to running back for the semi-final game at Empire Stadium.

"As long as the game means something," Sciarra said Tuesday, "I want to play all I can."

Last month Sciarra said he considered his brief career with the Lions finished because of his prolonged inactivity. He was the CFL's top rookie in 1976.

Head coach Vic Rapp said he hesitated in making the move earlier in the season because he didn't want to break up a winning combination. He was referring to fullback Jim Harrison and halfback Mike Strickland.

HARRISON FINISHED

Harrison suffered a knee injury two weeks ago and is finished for the season. Strickland gained only 13 yards in seven carries Saturday in a 31-21 loss here to Winnipeg.

The Lions, who led the WFC at one stage of the season with a 9-2 record, stumbled coming home and finished second with a 10-6 mark, including three straight losses.

Rapp also is considering using Hugh McKinnis at fullback against the Bombers. McKinnis, once a star with Calgary Stampeders, was cut last month by Seattle Seahawks of the National Football League.

The Lions finished the regular season with LeRoy Moss at fullback in place of Harrison.

Bright was a running back in college at Florida State and has been used as a runner occasionally this year. He is the Lions' top kick return threat.

Strickland, who rushed for more than 1,000 yards in 1976, has been ineffective most of this year. He averaged just 3.6 yards a carry in league games.

Rapp said the loss of Harrison has hurt the Lions more than anything on offense.

Pay schedule made for NHL entrants

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League and representatives of the Canadian Major Junior Hockey League have reached a compromise for a revised schedule of payments for players taken in the amateur draft, it was announced Wednesday.

In a joint statement, John Ziegler, NHL president and Ed Chynoweth, president of the Western Canada Hockey League and chairman of the CMJHL committee, said that the compromise would be recommended to their respective organizations.

Representatives from the NHL, CMJHL and Canadian Amateur Hockey Association met Tuesday in Toronto.

The recommended payment schedule would call for $1,000 for each player drafted.

NHL clubs would be obliged to pay $7,000 for each player drafted in the first round and signed to an NHL contract and $5,000 for each player taken in the second round and signed to a contract.

Teams would be required to pay $4,000 for each player grabbed in the third or later rounds and signed to contracts and in all cases $5,000 for each 40 games played in the NHL during the next four seasons succeeding the players' draft with an overall minimum of $20,000 per player.

For each drafted player signed to an NHL contract in the first or second season following the draft, a payment of $4,000 was required to be made to the club from which the player was taken.

Reds go intermediate

by Juliette Proom
Herald Sports Writer
Three new players will be in uniform when the Reds make their first appearance as an intermediate level team in Pacific Northwest Hockey League action Saturday night.

Fordie Cochrane has been relieved of coaching duties but will play for the Reds as a defenceman. Cochrane made no comment on the change.

Another defenceman has been added to the team. Dale Kushner is quite experienced and is a strong skater. Approaching 30, his age will balance out the youthful bent of the team.

Art Frenette, a veteran forward of the PNWHL will also be dressed for Saturday night's game against the Smithers Totems. Frenette was among the top 10 scorers of the league when he played for Prince Rupert last season.

Both Cochrane and Frenette will give up positions held on Terrace Commercial League teams.

Two of the younger players with the Reds will return to the Minor Hockey League. Bruno Hibbur and Troy Farkvam, both 14 years old, will leave the Reds.

Red L'Estrange, general manager and new coach of the team, said "we're sad to lose them."

Landon's multiple talents show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Landon, star of NBC's Little House on the Prairie, does exactly what the director orders, at least every other week.

Landon, you see, works both sides of the camera—as actor and director.

Under the hot sun in the Simi Valley, about 50 miles northwest of Los Angeles, director Landon sets up a camera angle.

Then he rushes out, becomes character Charles Ingalls and starts nailing the side of a house as part of a scene.

Landon is the star, producer, sometimes writer and one of two directors of the series, now in its fourth season.

"I like making films," says Landon, who is somewhere in his 40s.

There are advantages and disadvantages to directing a show in which you're also starring, he says. "The disadvantage being, of course, you just can't sit back and see what you did in the dailies (the raw film shot each day).

"Aside from that, you just have to count on your instincts. The big advantage of course is that I co-operate completely with myself."

AVOIDS HASSLES

Landon, on lunch break on location, leans back in the folding chair under the mess tent and laughs.

"When the director says move, I move, wherever he wants me to go, I go there. So that way I can get a lot of work done without a lot of hassles."

Landon directs every other Little House episode, alternating with William F. Claxton.

"Someday I'm sure I will direct full-time, but in the meantime my cheques are larger for acting than they are for directing." Again he laughs.

Landon worked 14 years on his first regular series, Bonanza, where he played Little Joe starting in the late '50s.

The character on the screen in his current series is a familiar one to the actor. Landon says he's pretty much the same guy at home with his wife, the former Lynn Noe, and the couple kids, aged 4 to 26, including three by previous marriages.

The Landons' school-age children aren't permitted to watch television on school nights with two exceptions: certain specials recommended by the school and Little House on the Prairie.

Jumps for nothing?

LONDON (CP) — Disc jockey Steven Haines, 19, jumped off 28 Thames bridges for charity but his good deed has only landed him in hot water.

Haines, who has dyed orange hair, was fined £50 for breaking a 92-year-old bylaw by climbing the parapet of London's Tower Bridge for one of his dives.

But his splash with authority didn't stop there. The magistrate criticized the Victorian bathing costume he wore to court. The costume had a belt made of 30 police whistles.

"He means no disrespect," said defence counsel Cynthia Cruickshank. "He is a young man who does naturally dress in a bizarre fashion."

Afterwards, a charity spokesman contested that Steven's dives helped raise £14,000 for one-parent families.

Nixon tapes deemed 'far more offensive'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public release of 30 White House tape recordings about the Watergate political espionage scandal would expose Richard Nixon to embarrassments "far more offensive" than the former president already has suffered, the U.S. Supreme Court was told today.

Nixon lawyer William Jefferson told the court that the 22 hours of tapes played at the 1974 Watergate cover-up trial of Nixon's top advisers should not go public.

"Tapes are susceptible to uses that are far more offensive" than trial transcripts, he said.

Transcripts of the tapes were widely published during the 1974 trial of former attorney-general John Mitchell and ex-White House aides H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman.

Jeffress said Nixon and others would suffer "mental anguish" if the tapes are released to "every disc jockey, every television entertainer ... to be played relentlessly."

RELEASE OKAYED

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in October, 1976, that the tapes could be released for broadcast on television and radio and copied for sale as records and tape cassettes.

Arguing for those who want the tapes released,

Washington lawyer Edward Bennett Williams claimed: "I don't know of any common law right not to be embarrassed by one's inculpatory words."

Williams was representing Warner Communications, which wants to reproduce the tapes and market them for home sale.

New York lawyer Floyd Abrams, representing the three commercial broadcast networks, public radio and a broadcast news directors association, said he was arguing "the right of the public not present in the court to hear the tapes."

Williams noted that any distributor or broadcaster of the tapes would have "to take the full risk" of lawsuits resulting from such use.

The bulk of the 880 reels of tape recordings left behind by Nixon when he resigned as president in 1974 are not involved in the case.

If the tapes are released, they would let the public hear for the first time the actual voices—the tones and vocal inflections—of Nixon and the Watergate figures discussing the scandal.

The suit to have the tapes released was filed by NBC, ABC, CBS, the Public Broadcasting Service, the Radio Television News Directors Association and Warner Communications.

It's super music on CBC-TV's Superspecial' Mon. Nov. 21 at 9 p.m. entitled: The Beatles' Music Changed the World...And How.

The most popular musical group of all time, and a symbol of youth in the 1960's, the Beatles wrote one hundred and ninety-five songs during their period of togetherness and collaboration. The majority of them were chart-toppers on hit parades from India to Inuvik, and even today, years after their final split, amazing offers are being made, in the millions, to entice them to re-group. If only for a single concert.

This special is a colorful package of salutes to the four superstars who started it all, with such pop luminaries as David Clayton Thomas with Blood, Sweat and Tears; Melanie; Frankie Valli, Melissa Manchester and Ritchie Havens lending their talents in tribute.

Lennon, McCartney, Harrison and Starr are not actually appearing, but their spirit, in their wonderfully lyrical songs, shines through such favorites as Long and Winding Road (Melanie), Got to Get You Into My Life (Melissa Manchester), Lady Madonna (Blood, Sweat and Tears), Here Comes the Sun (Richie Havens), and Fool on the Hill (Frankie Valli), plus many more.

The essence of the Beatles musical appeal was their gift for melody and a driving rhythm. The dynamic performances of David Clayton Thomas with BS & T, for instance on Get Back, and the basic sweetness of Melissa Manchester singing the familiar Here; There and Everywhere, evoke a feeling of the Beatles that is right on.

Cartoonist works best when pregnant

TORONTO (CP) — Lynn Johnston's best cartoons are done when she is pregnant. In her first book of cartoons in 1975, she sketched a pack of youngsters eagerly waiting in line to see a pregnant woman.

The expectant mother was Ms. Johnston. The expectant lads had come home on a personal invitation from her first son, "feeling for the rare thrill of the baby."

That first book—David,

We're PREGNANT!!—has sold to 30,000 buyers across Canada.

The book of 101 cartoons drawn with sure strokes, all deal with that essentially womanly but universal theme of pregnancy.

Ms. Johnston, a 30-year-old native of Dundas, Ont., 50 miles southwest of Toronto, is the top female cartoonist in Canada.

It hasn't been easy to crack the male-dominated world of cartooning.

As a single parent, she supported herself and four-year-old Aaron for three years doing illustrations of surgical operations for McMaster University medical faculty in Hamilton, then working at an engraving firm specializing in farm machinery.

Her first book came out as her first rocky marriage finally went aground.

Her second book—Hi Mom! Hi Dad!—on the first year of Aaron's life, is going like the last scoop of ice cream on a hot day at the playground.

But even now it is not exactly easy street. She is supporting her second husband while he finishes his dental training. Her husband helps make ends meet by assembling dental equipment.

Ms. Johnston does cartoons, not "funnies" or "comics." Many of the faces she draws with a few strokes are serious, sad, worried, frustrated or just astonished at life's travails.

"A lot of cartoons aren't meant to be funny," she said. "They're characteristic of what life is all about."

Canadian film wins grand prize

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian film Who Has Seen the Wind has been awarded the Grand Prize at the Paris Film Festival, a spokesman for Astral Films Ltd., the film's distributor, said Tuesday.

Jill de Wolfe said the $1.1-million production, which stars Gordon Pinsent, Jose Ferrer, Hellen Schaver, Charmion King and Brian Painschaud, has also been nominated for 10 Canadian film awards.

Produced and directed by Allan King, the film deals with life in a small Saskatchewan town in the 1930s. It was shot in Arcola, Sask., last year.

The film is based on a novel by Canadian author W.O. Mitchell.

Pensioner popcorn

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — When Leo Bernardo retired four years ago after 25 years in a lumber products factory, he couldn't face having nothing to do.

So he entered the popcorn business.

"When I retired I wanted to live, not die," the 69-year-old resident of Sault Ste. Marie said through an interpreter. "I had to do something."

"I had a chance to buy this popcorn machine in Toronto for $700. It looked good so I bought it. It gave me a reason to walk and exercise."

Bernardo, wheeling his cart along the streets, has become a familiar sight for youngsters in the city's west end.

The bag of popcorn he used to sell for 10 cents now costs 25 "but the kids, they still buy as much as before."

On a good day, he can make more than $10, but he doesn't keep track of his earnings. He says as long as he's not losing money, he's happy.

In a year, the vendor goes through 100 pounds of popcorn, a gallon of coconut oil and a box of salt—an investment of about $50. A vending licence costs $60.

When business is bad, the birds in Bernardo's back yard have a popcorn feast. "My popcorn is always fresh," he says.

But Bernardo, with false teeth, can't enjoy his popcorn like he used to.

Despite some difficult days, and slow, wet summers, Bernardo says he will stay in the business for as long as he's able to walk.

HAMILTON (CP)

Maggie Chan had her big chance recently as the only woman driver in the McMaster University Soapbox Derby. But she didn't win a heat—the ill-fated vehicle, built by a male metallurgy student who found he couldn't squeeze into it, stopped 50 yards short of the finish line. COUNCIL ON WOMEN MET HALIFAX (CP) — The first meeting of the Nova Scotia Advisory Council on the Status of Women was held recently in Halifax and dealt with getting the council organized and selecting areas the council will deal with. The council is dedicated to helping women realize their full potential and use it to its best advantage.

Provincial gov't chastised in closure of agricultural industry

RICHMOND, B.C. (CP) — A Delta, B.C. potato grower said Tuesday he will close his $5-million potato plant in December because the provincial government has refused to give him financial assistance.

George Spetifore told the British Columbia legislature's food inquiry hearing the closure could mean a layoff of 125 workers, no market for at least 16,000 tons of potatoes and an estimated farm income assurance bill for the government of $1 million.

MLA Walter Davidson called on the government to reconsider the refusal of aid because Spetifore's competitors have received substantial help from the federal government.

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said the decision was made by his ministry "after a thorough review."

AIDS COMPETITION

Spetifore, who launched production last year, said he had a market for 35,000 to 40,000 tons of potatoes despite heavy competition from two of Canada's biggest producers, McCain of New Brunswick and McLeans of Prince Edward Island. Both companies have received substantial aid from the federal government and their provincial governments, he said.

"What I found is that the Biblical story of David and Goliath is just a myth unless you have the ear of someone up high or have political influence," he said.

Spetifore said that the two companies recently dropped the price of institutional french fries by three cents a pound.

"When you consider the amount of low interest money, grants, etc., and freight assistance they get from east to west compared with me who has no assistance, I felt I could not continue," he said.

He explained he has a debt load of about $100,000 a month and "all I wanted was some government assistance to reduce this."

USE TAXES

"If they had not reduced their price, which by the way comes with a shortage of supply in the Maritimes, I could have survived. It is obvious to anyone who knows this industry that they are after my tail, but the damnable thing is that they're after it with taxpayers money."

Davidson estimated that McCain has received almost $20 million under various government aid programs in recent years.

Spetifore said discussions with the provincial government have taken place over the past year. He said Hewitt told him earlier Tuesday it was a cabinet decision not to grant aid.

"We didn't specify any amount but if we could reduce our debt load we could meet their (the eastern) competition with ease," he said.

The refusal of aid was criticized by Larry Jorgenson, manager of the B.C. Coast Vegetable Marketing Board and Alan Barker, manager of the B.C. Coast Vegetable Co-operative.

"I am shocked because there had been an indication of favorable feeling by the provincial government,"

Jorgenson said. "This is just another example of the lack of understanding this government has for the agricultural sector. Sometime soon they are going to have to ask themselves if they want an industry in B.C."

Blood, Sweat & Tears

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — There's a lot of brass in the popular musical group Blood, Sweat and Tears, not only in the horn section, but also in the barbed comments on popular music by lead singer David Clayton-Thomas.

For example, Canadian Clayton-Thomas feels many popular rock stars don't care about the image they present to others — as long as they make money.

"Whatever happened to the artist's conscience?" he asked in a recent interview. "Whatever happened to the days when an artist would sit down and say, 'Gee, the kids look up to me, and they're going to emulate me so I better set a good example.'"

"If you can sell 10 more records by letting it be known that you're a transvestite junkie, then by all means go ahead," he said of the prevailing attitude.

Clayton-Thomas is no less outspoken on American musical tastes: "Americans are very money-minded and all they remember are the hits. If you have a million-seller, that's it. Everything is judged by the almighty buck."

He also said jazz "is almost a dirty word in America. You have to go anywhere else but the USA to see jazz appreciated."

JAZZ NEEDS BREAK

Part of the problem is that "jazz is very deeply rooted in the black heritage, and until Americans start giving the black man a good shake, it's doubtful they'll give his music a fair shake," he said.

Despite those problems, BST keeps playing and trying to "bring pop and aesthetic tastes together in America," Clayton-Thomas said.

BST, credited in the late 1960s with what Clayton-Thomas terms the "corn-flake" title of jazz-rock creator, turned out hits like Spinning Wheel, You Made Me So Very Happy and many others.

Typically, a BST cut has Clayton-Thomas smoothly working his powerful voice into the group's horn-playing. That technique, he said, comes from methods used by the big bands years ago.

He said his presence helps with audiences which are not into "heavy jazz" and look for an "up-front entertainer." But in a New York jazz club, "I have all these soloists who can take over."

Clayton-Thomas pointed with pride to the musical abilities and backgrounds of other BST members. He said Tony Klatka, on trumpet and flugelhorn, did arrangements for Woody Herman, while Greg Herbert, on saxophone, was Duke Ellington's premier soloist.

Larry Willis, on acoustic piano, has a doctorate in music, while Neal Steubenhaus, on bass guitar, has taught college courses in music. Others in the group include David Barger on bass trombone and tuba; Mike Lawrence, trumpet and flugelhorn; Bobby Economo on drums, and Randy Hebertson on electric guitar.

Bill Smiley Perplexing questions

By BILL SMILEY

This week, I am perplexed by several questions, and I turn for possible answers to the only people in the world I can trust for honest answers: my faithful readers, all four of them.

For example. By what editorial inanity does the Globe and Mail, which grandly calls itself Canada's National Newspaper, run on its front page a five-column by eight inches photo of Pierre Trudeau getting his hair cut? What is the symbolism, the hidden meaning, the secret code, the deep, interpretive analysis, behind this picture? Can anyone help?

Is Mr. Trudeau symbolically trimming his sails for a fall election? Is it to show that the P.M. is mortal, after all, and that his hair grows, like that of us lesser beings? Perhaps it's a secret warning to Margaret that, despite talk of a reconciliation, he's not going to let his hair grow and become a flower child. I dunno, but it sure has me baffled.

Next question: Where do things get lost to? It seems to me that my wife and I have spent more time this past summer looking for things than we have sleeping. Looking for things that were

"Right there, right on that counter yesterday."

Looking for things is one of the most frustrating, irritating pastimes in this materialistic society of ours. It has brought many a marriage to the teetering point, and if the union was already teetering, pushed it over the brink.

A couple of weeks ago, she lost the keys to the car. After a 12-hour non-stop search, no keys. Oh, we had keys for the other car, the battered old Dodge. Only one catch. It was in the garage, and the keyless car was sitting right behind it, immovable.

Twenty-four hours later, I called a lock-picking specialist. He was out of town, but would call me when he got back. Just before he did, and I had to fork out eleven-seventy dollars, the old lady found the keys, without looking. They were in the vegetable bin, with a turnip, a butternut squash, and a bag of cooking onions. It was certainly the logical place for them.

Then my new black $10 belt went missing. It was the first belt I'd bought for 12 years, and I was rather proud of it. I knew it wasn't really lost, because I always hang it up with my ties. It was obvious that my wife, in her eternal tidying, had stuck it away somewhere, as she so often does with things that I then cannot find. But she swore, as she always does, that she hadn't touched it, mentioning in passing that she was sick and tired of looking for things that I had lost. Naturally, words followed, in which the phrase "car keys" inadvertently popped out several times.

But the mystery of the missing belt was readily solved when I decided to wear my new, blue, fit-like-a-glove summer trousers. I couldn't find them. High or low. Then with a flash of intuition, I knew where my belt was. It was with the pants, because I never unbelt, just hang the whole works on a hook.

It was quite a relief to know where my belt was. It was equally reassuring to know that the pants were with the belt. But it was slightly dampening to admit that both were lost. They still haven't turned up.

There are only two possibilities. One is that a pantless burglar crept into our bedroom, snatched my trousers and crept off into the night, once more modestly attired. The second I don't even like to dwell on.

The last time I had worn those pants, that belt, was to a party. It wasn't a strip poker party, but it was a fairly lively one.

Did I do a strip tease and forget to redress my little pecadillo?

Did I tear them off on the way home from the party and throw them out the car window? Sounds silly, but the other morning I went out to get the morning paper, and there on my back walk was a pair of brand-new blue shoes, with thick white rubber soles, in a shoe-box, with only the lid missing. Only the Lord knows who, for what mad reason, in what temporary mental aberration, flung them there. But they are just my size and finders keepers.

And this whole probe brings up the Case of the Missing Socks. What in the name of all that is unholy becomes of socks when they are put through the washer and dryer? They never go missing in pairs, always singles. I'll bet I have nine single socks in my drawer, all different colors or knits.

I've gone down with a flashlight and peered, a bit shaken, into the interiors of those machines. No socks.

They can't go down the drain, or it would be plugged. Do they do a reverse Santa Claus and go up the spout of the dryer with the hot air? It's a little frightening, as though someone were trying to tell me something. About my feet? Someone with a feet fetish?

Just one more question. Where were all the editorial writers who are now screaming about the stupidity of changing highway signs to kilometers instead of miles, when I was lambasting the whole metric-Celsius nonsense almost a year ago?

Can you, gentle reader, do a fast bit of arithmetic in your head when you encounter a road sign announcing the speed limit is 45 kilometers per hour? When your speedometer is marked in miles per hour? And will be for years to come?

Will you happily pay your fine when the cop puts the big blue arm on you and claims you were exceeding the speed limit by seven k.p.h.? Must we all start driving with a calculator-computer in one hand?

Now these questions may not be as important as some: How old is God? How hot is it in hell? How long is a straight line? How far does a rolling stone? Whither the Flat Earth Society? Why does everyone pick on me?

But they are, poor things, mine own, and I'd like some answers.

Strange happenings in London church

LONDON (AP) — Bankers, businessmen, brokers and secretaries are lying on the floor of an Anglican church once a week in the City of London financial district, learning how to cope with stress.

Leaving their coats in the pews and with pillows under their heads, they sprawl for half an hour on their backs in St. Mary Woolnoth, responding to orders from physiotherapist Laura Mitchell to pull back their shoulders, spread their elbows, move their hands, turn their knees, point their feet and drop their jaws.

Prostrate bodies cover the green carpet in the central aisle and the red-carpeted foot of the high altar.

Above the altar, inscribed with the Ten Commandments, the Lord's Prayer and the Creed, seven carved, gilded cherubs gaze impassively down on the strange noonday scene.

"Nobody thinks it strange—all life is challenge and response," said the vicar, Rev. Geoffrey C. Harding, 67, who introduced the sessions as an addition to his weekly lectures series, Relax and Meditate.

GET ALL KINDS

"We get all kinds coming in, from assistant general managers to tea ladies," Harding said. "We don't charge anything. There is an offering plate, at the door."

After one half-hour session, Jerry Palmer, 42, who works in the clearing department of a bank, said he took part "because I'm just at the beginning of the stress age."

"I used to feel tired at the end of every day after rushing about. My wife seemed to be in charge of me. After coming here I find I have no fear of anybody and I'm in complete control at work and at home."

As one of the recumbent 15 men and eight women on the church floor, Palmer heard Miss Mitchell intone: "Only three of you have open eyes. I have not told you to close them—your bodies are receiving so much relaxation that they have gone ahead of me."

TREATMENTS FAILED

Miss Mitchell, a grey-haired Scotswoman, said she worked out her method of light physical exercises, most of which can be done at any time, after standard treatments failed for her when she collapsed in 1957 with neck and limb pains.

"I started by doing the opposite movement in each joint to counteract muscle tension and the relief was enormous," she said. "I taught my technique first to antenatal mothers, who said it greatly helped them in labor pains."

The vicar, whose 250-year-old church is on Lombard Street in the heart of London's banking and financial district, said his father was a doctor and his mother a nurse.

"I have always been interested in the sick and in healing," he explained. "We lose 330 million working days every year in Britain through ill health, and two million adults need tranquillizers or other pills to keep going."

"The knowledge our visitors take away from this church they pass on to others and, because they found it in a church, perhaps they will also pass on something of Christian goodwill."

The Turner connection

LONDON (CP) — Nearly 5,000 etchings and engravings by Joseph Turner, the great English landscape painter who died in 1851, have been traced in public and private collections all over the world.

The Turner Society, which is campaigning for a permanent Turner gallery at Somerset House in the Strand, hopes to put most of them on exhibition there before the end of the year.

"These works add a new dimension to the Turner collection," said Alfred Well, the society's campaign co-ordinator. "After Turner died in 1851 the etchings and engravings were sold off by the Turner Trust."

"There is a court order of 1872 that this material should be auctioned and the proceeds given to the Turner family. All of them came from Turner's possessions, but someone destroyed the plates in order to lend rarity value to the collection."

About 1,000 went on show recently when the world's first Turner gallery opened at Denver, Colo. Since then the society has been trying to trace the others.

Milk in danger

TORONTO (CP) — A University of Guelph food scientist said today stores are still subjecting milk packaged in plastic jugs or transparent plastic pouches to intense fluorescent lighting although the light causes the milk to lose much of its nutritive value.

Dr. J.M. deMan, head of the university's food science department, told a news conference that more than two years after the release of a report on the harmful effects of fluorescent light upon milk and other dairy products, "many retail food outlets continue to expose the contents of their dairy counter to light intensity approaching that of the noon-day sun."

DeMan, whose most recent study involved a survey of dairy display cases in food stores in Guelph and Metropolitan Toronto said "we were shocked by the light intensity in some outlets."

"One location was subjecting milk in transparent plastic bags and jugs to more than seven times the absolute maximum light intensity recommended in our study."

He added that "just as important as the nutritional loss by light exposure is the fact that an oxidized off-flavor developed in the transparent pouches and plastic jugs within six hours, and highly significant flavor changes occurred in 12 hours."

DeMan said that milk in opaque cardboard cartons showed no significant flavor change in 48 hours.

"Canada's milk supply is one of the best in the world," he said, "but it is out in the stores that the quality declines."

DeMan said that consumers in general "have no idea how and when the off-flavor develops in milk because the chemical deterioration is induced by light."

However, he said that milk has a yellowish tinge when it has been damaged by fluorescent light.

He suggested that milk packaging be changed to the opaque containers and be modified.

"The golden opportunity is when we switch to metric packaging to eliminate the plastic jugs and pouches," he said. "If that doesn't happen we'll be stuck with the problem forever."

DeMan said that in his studies the loss of vitamin C was significant.
